Busting the International lengue seems to be one of the most popular winter sports among newspaper folks. When the boys have nothing else to write about, they draw their typewriters up close and pound the International lengue into bankruptcy.  Bent But Not Broken. Quarters may be established, the logical hangout for players and fans is beaded this way, the fans have been hoping for good weather, but if the groundhog legend holds there will be some drary days still to come and it would not be advisable to bring out the plan beach auits as yet. An air of engerness, however, pervades the Texas league circuit, and the fans are crowding the barrier ready to break into the ball parks.

At least two clubs in the circuit will be rebuilt from the ground up. One of these are the Broneines and the other the Dallas Giants. Both are expected to be important factors in the size pen mant race and the plans that are being made in the rounding up of the players would indicate that both San Antonio and Dallas will have winning clubs. AMERICAN WAS KIDNAPED. THEN KILLED, IN MEXICO

Then killed, in Mexico
The American found murdered Tuesday evening south of Juares, was kidnowpred in Juares and taken out to the lonely spot to be murdered, according to the Juaren officials.

This theory is burne out by the fact that, when the body was found, the arms were fied with a belt and the feet with a scarf, both of which had been taken from the person of the murdered man. According to the belief in Juarez an old feud was the rosult of the killing, enomies of the man binding and gagging him in town and then taking him to the spot where be was murdered.

All efforts at identifying the man have so far failed. Local laundries have no record of the markings found on the cellar that was found near the body. A number of persons in both Juarez and El Pazo, when shown the picture of the dead man stated fint the face seemed familiar but none could definitely identify it.

The Juarez anthorities have decided not to allow the body to be taken to the American side. Arrangements are being made to hury the body this evening.

the game meant a great deal to his club, which at that time had a good chance to win the pennant.

Johnson Teok Chance.

Griffith had every confidence in Johnson's ability to pitch the team out of the hole, but even at that he healtated a long time before deciding. I recall what Johnson said when the matter was put up to him:

"Recards don't win pennants, and perhaps this game will, so I'll take a chance," was his reply.

The failure of Johnson to win brought planty of criticism to the manager, yet the manager had taken the second guess is this case, and usually the second guess is the best one.
